that, I will keep speaking, and when you think you've found it, then you can just make a sign. Under the law right now, people who are going to be carrier enforcement officers and those who are going to be troopers get identical training. They train together with a proviso that applies only to those going into carrier enforcement. They get additional training that is specific to being carrier enforcement officers. So a carrier enforcement officer could move from that position to being a trooper without requiring additional training. The trooper would require task specific training to become a carrier enforcement officer. So where there can be movement both ways across the line, the one who would require additional training would be the trooper. What this language that I am trying to strike would do is say that anybody functioning as a carrier enforcement officer must also discharge the duties of troopers. Already there is more than enough for carrier enforcement officers to do and, apparently, more than enough because the number of inspections has dropped. So how are you going to increase the number of inspections by expanding the duties and responsibilities of carrier enforcement officers? There are not categories of carrier enforcement officers. Anybody who works that job is known as a carrier enforcement officer and that's what the committee amendment says, that's what the present law says. You don't have a carrier enforcement officer A, who is a nontrooper, and a carrier officer B, who is a trooper. All you have are state troopers and some will be assigned to the carrier
